Engines off in council drive to improve our air quality

■ 270 people in the borough die from illnesses related to poor air quality every year

On Clean Air Day, Thursday 21 June, Waltham Forest councillors and officers joined local schoolchildren and residents to send a clear message: Our air is too polluted – let's work together to make the changes that will help us all breathe more easily.

Shockingly, 9,400 premature deaths per year in London alone can be linked to toxic air. Cars, vans and lorries are the largest contributors to air pollution – which is why the council conducts regular anti-idling operations outside schools and in town centres to educate drivers about the damage that leaving your engine running while stationary does to health, and particularly to the health of school children.

On the day an anti-idling operation took place around Walthamstow Central Station targeting taxis and those picking up friends and family from the borough's busiest rail and tube station. Those who left their engines running were given information about the harm traffic fumes can do and asked to switch off their engines while they wait.

Councillors, council staff and residents also made pledges about how they would help improve air quality. Council Leader Clare Coghill committed to continue walking and cycling to and from work, while Deputy Leader and Cabinet Member for the Environment, Cllr Clyde Loakes pledged to support initiatives which help deliver car free school runs across the borough.

Residents and schoolchildren joined in and made their own pledges. Pupils and teachers at Longshaw Primary Academy made a mural displaying theirs, including pledges to walk more often and learning to use bikes safely.

Cllr Loakes said: "Protecting the lungs of our youngest residents is a major priority, which is why we hold regular anti-idling operations outside the borough's schools and work with our schools to develop travel plans.

"We can all make a big difference to our health and the health of others by choosing to leave our cars at home and travelling around either on foot or by bike."

Research by the Mayor of London has shown that a third of car journeys in the capital could be walked in 25 minutes and nearly half could be cycled in just 10.

Squeaky clean council team force closure of pest-infested takeaways

Fortune House in Leyton

Mouse droppings at Fortune House

In late May, officers visited Chinese takeaway Fortune House, 454 High Road, Leyton after receiving a complaint of a mouse infestation. They were horrified to find droppings on storage shelves in the kitchen as well as evidence that mice had been gnawing on the cleaning clothes. The premises were immediately closed to prevent any risk to public health, and when the case came up in front of magistrates they confirmed the closure and awarded costs of £980 to the council.

In early June, another Chinese takeaway was closed for poor kitchen hygiene and a thriving mouse infestation. Officers were disgusted by the filthy kitchen of New Grace's, 299 High Road, Leytonstone where food was found rotting in cooking utensils and drinking glasses were contaminated with mouse droppings. Again, the restaurant was immediately closed by officers and magistrates awarded the council costs of £690 at the court hearing.

Neither restaurant was allowed to reopen until officers were satisfied that significant improvements had been made.

Deputy Leader and Cabinet Member for the Environment, Cllr Clyde Loakes, said: "These pictures are truly alarming. Why the owner of a food business – who knows their livelihood depends on meeting food safety standards – would allow their kitchen to get into this state is simply beyond me.

"Keeping a commercial kitchen clean, free of pests and up to the required standards should not be difficult for a responsible owner. If you do not make this effort, our officers will close you down and you will be made to pay costs in court. The reputation of your business will be irreparably damaged. Is it really worth it for the sake of cutting a few corners?"

From the Leader

Cllr Clare Coghill

London's toxic air is a catastrophic public health crisis and it gets worse every single day. Pollution from motor vehicles, wood burners and bonfires poison our air and has led to an increase in respiratory illnesses, such as asthma and contributed to early deaths. In London alone 9,400 premature deaths are linked to the high levels of toxicity in the air we breathe.

And of course, this does not even take into account the potentially irreversible damage we are doing to our environment.

We know air quality is one of our residents' biggest concerns and that is why Waltham Forest Council is taking real, positive action to clean up our air and help create a cleaner borough for all our residents. The Air Quality Action Plan was passed by cabinet earlier this month and sets out the 39 steps we will take to tackle dangerous levels of air pollution and improve the quality of life for all our residents.

The plan builds on our work over recent years to promote sustainable methods of transport, ensure that emissions from construction sites are minimised and raise public awareness of why air quality matters.

The health of our children is of paramount importance and that is why we have supported the introduction of 'Play Streets' where children can enjoy playing with friends and neighbours on their street and have held anti-idling operations outside our borough's schools to educate people on the damage noxious fumes can cause. The council has created our very own zero emissions delivery service – ZED – which uses either a cargo bike or electric van to make local deliveries to businesses and residents.

The borough has also recently completed the largest tree planting programme in Waltham Forest's history, which has seen the total number of trees in the borough surpass 50,000 for the first time. Trees help purge our air of damaging carbon monoxide, offsetting some of the effects of traffic fumes and we are committed to continuing to make our borough greener.

All of these actions together, as part of a co-ordinated and holistic approach to improving air quality, will not just help people breathe more easily and enable them to enjoy the fresh air in their neighbourhoods, it will save lives.

A wheely good time for kids

Schools from the borough take part in Mini Tour de Waltham Forest

More than 150 school pupils took part in the annual Mini Tour de Waltham Forest event earlier this month. This event, which took place during Bike Week at Leyton Jubilee Park, gave children from the borough's primary schools a taste of competitive cycling.

The children were invited to take part in time trials and races. They also got the chance to make pedal-powered smoothies and explore the blind spots of a truck in a bid to increase safety awareness. Hosted by the Enjoy Waltham Forest team, each school was offered the opportunity to take up a cycle training session with Cycle Confident ahead of the event. Yesterday, almost 1,000 people participated in the annual Le Tour de Waltham Forest, a community cycling event which saw participants choose one of three routes heading through the Leyton marshes, Lee Valley Regional Park and quiet residential roads of Walthamstow.

Loopy walkers on the move

Trustees, colleagues and friends of Branches Homeless Hostel, which supports single, homeless people, are more than 78 miles through their challenge to walk 150 miles in aid of the charity. The self-named 'Loopy Walkers' will take on the London Loop around the edge of outer London in 10 stages completing the circle in Chingford on 1 September. Funds raised will go towards the hostel's resettlement service which provides the extra, in-depth support needed by those who struggle with independent living after they move on from the Hostel. Winston Reid, Trustee and Organiser of the walk said: "Each year we help scores of homeless people by providing a temporary, safe refuge from the streets of Waltham Forest. "We also give person-centred support, facilitating the changes that homeless individuals strive to make in their lives, and supporting them in preparation for independent living. "We are really grateful to the many friends who have supported us so far and to the many local businesses who have agreed to sponsor us financially and by providing T-shirts for the walkers. The walk ends on 1 September at the Queen's Elizabeth Hunting Lodge in Chingford.

If you can sponsor the Loopy Walkers for £1 or more per mile, visit www.give.net/TheLOOPChallenge2018

Volunteer Nicola Millington in the studio where they broadcast 24 hours per day

In 2013 Ian Chambers was working in the City of London and volunteering for Barts hospital radio in his spare time. He began thinking about how the world's media had descended on East London during the Olympic Games in 2012 and ways he could harness that excitement into a longer-term community offering.

East London Radio (ELR) was born. Started in a community building in Hackney Wick and moving to its main studios in Leytonstone High Road in 2014, it now broadcasts 24 hours a day, seven days a week. It targets seven London boroughs – Waltham Forest, Hackney, Tower Hamlets, Newham, Barking and Dagenham, Havering and Redbridge.

Now the Director of ELR, Ian explains: "We wanted to get East London talking and we certainly have done that. We're a talk radio station rather than one that is music-focussed and we aim to be positive about the area, letting people know the many good things that are happening in our part of London."

"We moved to Waltham Forest in 2014 to set up a studio next to the Star of India restaurant, which is run by Shah Ahmed and who is a strong supporter of ELR – he just extended our lease so we will be here until at least 2021.

"The Council's commitment to recycling was reflected by us when we were setting up the studio; it is mainly furnished with good quality recycled items."

"We are a community interest company run by volunteers so we benefit from a discount on our business rates which, as we do all our own fund-raising, is a big help in keeping our running costs down."

"The station is run by around 50 volunteers with about a third of those living in Waltham Forest. They range from people in their 20s to their 70s who produce their own shows for broadcast by the station. Shows include regular broadcasts from two Waltham Forest comedians – Ninia Benjamin and Susan Murray – while our storyteller produces a show that links up with storytellers from cultures across the world.

"Our coverage of grass roots football is unparalleled thanks to our links with the Essex Senior League. It means we can broadcast a live show every Thursday evening concentrating on our local teams and other leagues, including women's football."

Ian added: "We only accept volunteers from the seven boroughs we represent – the minimum age is 18. To make radio more accessible we now have studios in Redbridge, Newham and Tower Hamlets, as well as our main studio in Waltham Forest."

"The skills and experience we offer volunteers has helped several of them to move into careers in broadcast media with some now working for BBC local radio and BBC Africa."

"We also run outreach programmes where we teach school children how to write and produce their own radio show, which is then broadcast on air. Last year we had 500 pupils from Tower Hamlets take part in our term-time outreach and also ran a summer holiday project in Redbridge.

"We would love to do something similar here in Waltham Forest, especially as it is London's first Borough of Culture. We want to get involved in the events through 2019 and work with the Council to train up to 50 local people in broadcast and presenter skills."

"We also do a lot of outside broadcasts, from the police day in Higham Hill through to broadcasts from the Victoria and Albert Museum, Westfield Shopping Centre and City Hall."

Ian said: "We shine a spotlight on local businesses every week and also accept advertising and sponsorship from companies in east London. We have a loyal, growing audience and also use our social media accounts to support our on-air shows, and share community news."

"2018 is our fifth anniversary. We shall be holding a series of special events during the summer so do keep an eye on our website, come along and get involved."

“We’re all Team Waltham Forest”

Team Waltham Forest’s dedicated officers are on the streets 24/7

TEAM WALTHAM FOREST

Team Waltham Forest’s dedicated officers are on the streets 24/7. They do their utmost to keep our streets clean and crack down on people who fly tip, litter and carry out anti-social behaviour.

We caught up with Chris to find out about the work he’s doing to keep our borough at its best.

Hi Chris, tell us about your work

I joined Waltham Forest earlier this year. I’m a Neighbourhoods Manager for the North of the borough which covers a large area from Chingford Green to Chapel End.

Working with partners including the Police and officers from across the Council, we tackle everyday environmental crime, ASB and street cleansing issues.

The Task Force Team deals with the most difficult fly tipping, littering and anti-social behaviour hotspots. Neighbourhood officers, CCTV, Environmental Health, Parking, and Property Licensing all share information and together we use different tactics to clean up areas.

Tell us about the work you do to tackle fly tipping

We’re constantly investigating fly tipped material and this includes our crews who work overnight, checking through bags of rubbish for evidence or catching catch fly tippers with our CCTV cameras.

Fly tipping is a criminal offence and following investigation we fine people who fly tip £400. People who litter can now expect a £150 fine.

How can residents dispose of bulky waste?

Waltham Forest unlike any other London Borough collects bulky items free of charge, although there are charges for electrical items, due to the costs of these items specialist disposal requirements.

Residents can book the service at walthamforest.gov.uk/rubbish or take their rubbish to one of our three local Household Waste and Recycling Centres – in Chingford, Leyton and Walthamstow. Did you know that Waltham Forest is one of just two London Boroughs that has three Household Waste and Recycling centres? Most have just one and some have zero!

Are you using new technology as part of your work?

You can quickly report issues through our new Chatbot on Facebook @walthamforestcouncil and on Twitter @WFTellWalt You can also report issues on our website.

The team are on the streets with mobile devices – we get direct reports from the Chatbot in real time and we quickly investigate and gather evidence. The clean team then quickly clear away the problem.

How can residents play their part?

Tell us about neighbourhood problems whenever you see them and we’ll quickly investigate and clear things away. You can also remind friends and neighbours about how they should dispose of rubbish correctly.

What’s your favourite thing about working in the borough?

There’s a fantastic team spirit across the borough. We’re working together, we’re cracking down on problems and we’re improving our neighbourhoods. We’re all Team Waltham Forest!

Feature 17 homes for local people

The first phase of the Feature17 regeneration in Wood Street, Walthamstow, passed a crucial milestone this month and local residents who will benefit. On Friday 8 June the Topping Out Ceremony took place, which means internal works can now begin.

The first phase of homes, which will be available to the Council, is running two months ahead of schedule and includes 34 new homes for Council rent as well as 18 shared ownership properties prioritised to residents of Waltham Forest. The first residents are due to move into the rented units during January 2019 and the London Help to Buy scheme is available for the 51 private sale properties on this site which are available from July 2018.

Completion is planned for 2024 with the full development including 150 homes for Council rent as well as the shared ownership properties, commercial units and a new public plaza with a safe, secure play area.

Speaking at the ceremony, Countryside MD, Andy Fancy, said: "We are really excited to be celebrating this stage in the programme for Feature17. We are proud to be delivering the affordable units two months ahead of schedule, and this shows that keeping the community at the heart of a scheme is ingrained in our DNA.

"Feature17 is an excellent example of the local community, the council and Countryside working together bringing investment to the borough through their commitment to reviving the neighbourhood.

"Of the properties that are for sale in this phase of the development, half have been reserved by residents already living in Waltham Forest and we are particularly pleased at the number of local people working on the scheme, one in four of our workforce come from the borough." Leader of Waltham Forest Council, Cllr Clare Coghill, said: "Houses are not just investment opportunities or bricks and mortar – they are homes. They are places for people to enjoy living and where they should feel safe and happy, close to their families and friends.

"Working with responsible, socially-conscious developers like Countryside means we can secure high-quality homes for our residents that enable them to make the most of their life chances." The properties for private sale at Feature17 are leasehold as the Council has kept ownership of the land.

Meet Sam Hunt, London Borough of Culture 2019 Creative Director

Sam Hunt, Creative Director

I'm writing this on the second day into my second week as Creative Director of London Borough of Culture 2019. It is truly an honour to work on such an exciting project in a borough that is bursting with creativity.

So many people across Waltham Forest are emotionally and creatively invested in this project. I see it as my job that this goodwill is well placed, deserved and ultimately turned into very real opportunities for our community to get actively involved in our year as London Borough of Culture 2019.

The bidding process was an opportunity to awaken the sleeping might of the myriad of creatives, makers, artists and doers in Waltham Forest, and to focus their collective energy on a single goal – winning the bid! Now, we as a borough, need to refocus that energy on delivering on the promises made in that bid, creating a year of culture that can be enjoyed by every household, every person and every community in Waltham Forest and beyond!

This is the first time anything like this has happened in London and we are going to set the bench mark for those that follow to measure themselves against. It's been said a thousand times but it will be the entire borough that delivers the year and it is up to everyone to make the most of the opportunities something like this affords.

Over the coming months we will have more information on how you can get involved, whether you are a local business, artist, young person or an eager volunteer. Our team will be at the Walthamstow Garden Party and our Get Together events throughout the summer to discuss all of these opportunities in person, but until then it's about planning what it is you want to do in 2019. Come and meet us and we'll have a chat about how we can achieve it.

Borough's best theatre and arts celebrated

Flock Theatre Assemble perform at From the Forest (c) Louise Hall

Last week saw the launch of a fantastic 11 day theatre fringe festival in venues around Waltham Forest. Produced by Walthamstow based Beartuza, From the Forest theatre and arts festival aims to celebrate some of the best that the borough has to offer, with the majority of performances led by companies from or based in Waltham Forest.

Opening the much-anticipated festival on Thursday 21 May were local all-female theatre company, Flock Theatre Ensemble, retro entertainment duo Stokes & Summers, Write Network and Ink17, a group of writers from around the borough.

From the Forest is running until this Sunday 1 July and there are still plenty of chances to catch some of the award-winning theatre and family entertainment on offer.

This Wednesday 27 and Thursday 28 June, 'Shakespeare from Cues' will perform at Leytonstone's The Birds on Wednesday 27 and Thursday 28 June. The cast will be performing 'Romeo and Juliet' at Leytonstone's

The Birds. The performance is prepared from lines and cues only, with no group rehearsal, just as plays were prepared in Shakespeare's day.

For kids, Baby Panda bring the universally popular song Five Little Monkeys to life on Sunday 1 July, and E17 Puppet project present 'The Vote', a fun-filled run through the stories of women who fought to obtain the vote, and the people who tried to stand in their way.

Festival co-director Laura Chetty said: "It's been a great opening to the festival and it's so exciting to have all these great performances taking place simultaneously in our local venues. We're really looking forward to audiences being able to enjoy the great shows that we have in store for the rest of the festival"

Ana Brothers, Artistic Director of Flock Theatre Assemble said: "Being part of a festival such as From the Forest helps give you a platform and therefore a better chance of people hearing about your show. That's helpful as one of the hardest things for a fledgling theatre company is building an audience."

Tickets for From the Forest start at £5 and can be purchased at ftffestival.com/tickets.

Senior Pastor and Chaplain, Birkett Bennett

What does Borough of Culture mean to me?

Pastor Birkett Bennett is Senior Pastor at the Apostolic Church in Walthamstow, and is currently the Chaplain to Cllr Sally Littlejohn, the Mayor of Waltham Forest.

When talking about the London Borough of Culture 2019 programme he said: "It provides the opportunity for everyone to be a stakeholder. It's recognition of what we have already done in terms of our cultural mix, right across the spectrum. It caters for one and all – musically, culturally – everything! It's a panoramic, multicultural borough, which I am excited about. It has given us the opportunity to express and celebrate the cultural impact in our borough."

Help shape Coppermill neighbourhood

We want to hear the views of residents and businesses living and working in the Coppermill neighbourhood about how they get around the area and what they would like to see improved.

Last year Waltham Forest Council successfully secured funding from Transport for London to transform the Coppermill area into Liveable Neighbourhood, where it is easy and safe for people to get around on foot, by bike or public transport. We now have three years to work with local people to find out how they get around, what improvements they would welcome and what travel barriers they face.

To share your views from Friday 29 June visit <https://coppermill.commonplace.is> Change is afoot at St James Quarter. New homes and commercial space is being built on Brunner Road and South Grove, and more is in the pipeline. This includes Crate St James Street which will use the former car park to provide work space for local businesses.

Stop the Silence

Pupils at Kelmscott Secondary School

Ten Youth Health Champions at Kelmscott Secondary School have led on an initiative to raise awareness addressing violence against women and girls (VAWG). Kelmscott Secondary School's Youth Health Champions have been busy this month supporting the Stop the Silence campaign. Students delivered an art exhibition with pupils, teachers and local councillors discussing the issues. The art will feature at Gnome House on Blackhorse Lane, Walthamstow at the end of this month with funds generated from the campaign donated to Haven and Solace in Waltham Forest. As part of the school's ongoing work with Waltham Forest Council's VAWG programme, 10 VAWG Peer Champions have been trained to raise awareness in the school and among their peers, with a series of VAWG-themed assemblies. Head of Year teacher and Peer Champion, Sarah Dempsey said: "We don't always hear about daily domestic violence that is hidden behind closed doors that our students have brought to the fore so creatively in their campaign." The council's Public Health and VAWG team in partnership with Safer London, Asiana, ELOP and Respond, is working in seven secondary schools across the borough to embed key messages about gender equality, healthy relationships and child protection across the whole school environment.

More Info:

Visit www.walthamforest.gov.uk and search VAWG to find out more. If you or anyone you know have been affected call the national domestic violence helpline on 0808 2000 247.

What are Youth Health Champions?

The Youth Health Champions (YHC) programme is an initiative to equip young people with the skills, knowledge and confidence to be peer mentors and deliver health campaigns to raise awareness of various health topics and promote healthy living to their peers in schools. The programme which is delivered by the council's Public Health team has been running for 2 years now, with over 150 health champions now trained up over the past two years.

Lifesaving walk-in clinic for FGM survivors

Cervical cancer is the second most common cancer in England for women under the age of 35. Regular cervical smear tests greatly increases your chance of survival but for women who have experienced female genital mutilation (FGM), the physical and psychological trauma can prevent these women from having this life-saving test.

At Whipps Cross Hospital a new walk-in clinic is offering smear tests to FGM survivors. The clinic offers an FGM gynaecologist, psycho-social practitioner, midwife and a female trained sample-taker.

Dr Reeba Oliver, Consultant Obstetrician and Gynaecologist said: "We offer a specialist service, particularly to those women who avoid having a cervical screening test because of the fear a vaginal examination evokes.

"In some cases, an examination and smear is only possible after deinfibulation and the clinic offers this minor procedure on the same day."

Halima Bojang, FGM survivor said: "I was four years old when I underwent FGM in Gambia, where

Dr Reeba Oliver, Consultant Obstetrician and Gynaecologist and Mamta Sagar, Senior Practitioner (FGM)

75% of girls are genitally mutilated. I didn't fully understand the impact it has on women until I was 17. There is so much stigma associated with FGM but this clinic is so important. It's a place where we can come and get treatment in safe environment. "

The new clinic evolved from the maternity care service at Whipps Cross Hospital for women with FGM and is a joint partnership between Barts NHS Trust, the local CCG and Waltham Forest Council. Mamta Sagar, Senior Practitioner (FGM) at the council played a key role in the development of both clinics.

Mamta Sagar said: "The maternity service was not capturing younger non-pregnant women and older women over 50 who weren't having cervical smear tests.

"This new clinic will be lifesaving for FGM survivors. No appointment is needed and they can get specialist care. I strongly encourage local women to use the service, they will be treated with dignity and understanding."

The walk-in clinic will be held on the final Monday of the month from 9am-12pm at the Perineal Clinic, Whipps Cross Hospital.

Gardening volunteers blooming with William Morris community spirit

The William Morris flower beds

Just behind the William Morris Gallery in Lloyd Park, you may have spotted the most magnificent flower beds. With summer upon us, the beds are in full bloom with vibrant pink peonies, lilac lupins and silvery artichoke thistles.

All these plants are tended to by a team of volunteers. Some are retired, others are out of work. Some have disabilities and long-term illnesses, others were socially isolated before getting involved. This inclusive and welcoming group are always on the look out for new volunteers.

The group meets on Thursdays from 10am to 1pm with a tea and snack break included. All volunteers

“It is also very beneficial to volunteers in terms of improving their health and well-being through exercise and being outdoors and gaining knowledge, skills and confidence” are led by Lloyd Park's Community Gardener Cathy McLoughlin, who is also a gardening lecturer at Waltham Forest Adult Learning

Service (WFALS).

Cathy said: “The volunteers are incredibly dedicated. Some go on to do gardening training courses at Lloyd Park and some of those who have completed gardening courses with the Adult Learning Service go on to volunteer – so there is a lot of cross pollination!

Cathy herself started as a volunteer in 2014, getting to know the park while preparing a gardening course pilot linking WFALS and Waltham Forest Council's Parks Team.

Ellie Mortimer, Parks and Open Space Co-ordinator for the council, said more than 90 volunteers have been involved with the project with an average of 12 coming each week. The volunteers have helped the council to achieve Green Flag standard at Lloyd Park since 2013.

Ellie added: “This project benefits the whole community by helping to keep the park looking stunning. It is also very beneficial to volunteers in terms of improving their health and well-being through exercise and being outdoors and gaining knowledge, skills and confidence. It not only boosts people's life chances, it creates a great sense of community.”

Meet volunteers Sandra and Chris

Sandra Palmer

Sandra Palmer volunteers both at Hawkswood Plant Nursery in Chingford, which is run by OrganicLea, and the William Morris garden. She has studied for gardening qualifications and enjoys visiting botanical gardens such as Kew and Wiseley for inspiration.

She said: “Some people stop and ask you about the plants and they tell us how beautiful the park really is. It is all because we come in every Thursday and do this. And it is just so worth it. There is a good end to this. I look down afterwards from the balcony on the gallery and I think ‘this is our work.’

Chris Saunders

Chris Saunders has been a gardening volunteer since the project began. She said: “I love it because I meet such a different bunch of people. We get visitors coming from all over the country to visit the park and admire what we do, which is quite nice.

“I consider that this is my park – I live just half a mile down the road and this is my patch. And I just want to give back something to the community and to the borough.”
